SUPPLEMENTARY TABLE.

[In order at once to bring the entire work into one volume, and give the reader fuller information of the later criticisms than would otherwise be practicable, criticisms and citations which have appeared while this work was passing through the press, together with all others exhibited in the pages of Annals issued in continuation of Abbott's New York Digest, down to date, are indexed here by the name of the case noted, and a reference to the volume, subject and paragraph in the Annals, where the case will be found commented on. Thus Abbot v. Am. Hard Rubber Co., '84; corp. 46 n.; '85; corp. 16; trusts, 43, means that that case will be found cited or commented on in the Annual of 1884, under the title of "Corporations," at paragraph 46 n., and in the Annual of 1885 under the title of "Corporations," at paragraph 16, and under the title of "Trusts," at paragraph 43. This method, beside saving space, and bringing the work into one volume, has these additional advantages: It gives the reader ready access to other cases on the same subject where the principal case has not been cited, and it includes all citations which have any significance for the practitioner, thus making the work a table not only of cases criticised, but also, in respect of the period from July 1, 1882, to 1887, a complete Table of Cases Cited, with information as to the subject on which it was cited.]
